For the New-York Tribune. TO THE SPIRIT OF SLEEP. BY ELIZABETH J. EAMES. O gentle Sleep! Nature's soft muse!
How have I frightened thee, that thou no more
Wilt weigh my eye-lids down, and
Steep my senses in forgetfulness?

[Sha SPIRIT that hidest 'neath thy brooding wing The many-million woes and cares that spring In Man's harsh path by day-Thou who didst fold Earth's tired ones to thy breast, And on their heavy eye-lids softly rest, Chasing their cares away-Thou whose sweet ministry o'er the silent world, Is felt-whene'er thy pinion is unfurl'd-O unseen spirit! say By what enchanted spell-what magic sign, I too may hope to make thy blessings mine? Spirit of universal Nature's rest, Refresher of the frame by toil oppressed, Or lingering illness bow'd-Sweet influence that is ever, ever wooed Both for the restless mind and languid mood-For th' hopes and fears which crowd Into one little life-and through the day Prompt us to rise or struggle as we may-How shall the weary-bow'd, And weary hearted win thy bland caress, O thou that hast such holy power to blees? Spirit! I seek thee in the solemn night, Through the long watches, till the morning light, I seek thee, but in vain! The clear, calm stars and moon-beams on me shine-They bring no calmness to this heart of mine-No quiet to this brain; But pale and anxious, by sad thoughts oppressed, I turn and toss till morn (O welcome guest!)

Bringeth the light again;

And then, once more I close my drooping lids,

But Memory still thy soothing reign forbids.

The power to chase the shadows from my lot;

The gift is not with thee.

Who, soon or late, all human ills doth smother-

Will be more kind to me.

He will not scorn this sinking heart's appeal,

Which hath no sorrow but his touch can heal

Most sure and lastingly!

But turn beneath his shadowy wing to dwell.

In this climate, where thanges of weather are so sudden, and their effects so injurious, it is immensely important. A timely use of it has saved and will save thousands from the pains of protracted iffluess, from beds of languishing, from wasted frames, dekilitated constitutions, and even from death itself. The trilling sum paid for a bottle of this extraordinary currative, has often saved vast unus of money which must have been paid for medical attendance during a long course of painful sickness.
